Introduction to PAIA and POPIA

1. The Promotion of Access to Information Act 2 of 2000 (“PAIA”) was enacted to give effect to the constitutional right of access to information held by a private body which information is required to exercise or protect a right.
2. PAIA establishes a statutory right of a requester to access the records of a private body if the record is required for the exercise or protection of any right, the requester complies with all procedural requirements, and access is not refused in terms of any ground referred to in PAIA
3. Section 9 of PAIA however recognises that such right of access to information is not unlimited and is subject to justifiable limitations including but not limited to:
 - 3.1. the reasonable protection of privacy;
 - 3.2. commercial confidentiality; and
 - 3.3. effective, efficient, and good governance.
4. The justifiable limitation of the reasonable protection of privacy is incorporated in, and promoted by, the Protection of Personal Information Act 4 of 2013 (“POPIA”) which sets out, among other things, conditions for the lawful processing of personal information.
5. Together, PAIA and POPIA balance the need for access to information against the need to ensure the protection of personal information.
6. Section 51 of PAIA requires all private bodies to compile a manual which provides information on the types and categories of records held by the private body as well as certain information relating to the processing of personal information in terms of POPIA.
7. Accordingly, this document serves as such manual (“the Information Manual”).
